WORCESTER — Bowdoin Construction Corp. opened a new office at the Worcester Business Center on Millbrook Street Thursday morning as the company continues to manage projects in Central Massachusetts and southern New England.

Bowdoin's new 1,200-square-foot office is situated at 67 Millbrook St., Suite 209. The company, which has 51 employees, is headquartered in Needham Heights and has another regional office in East Berlin, Connecticut.

"This is further evidence of the momentum in Worcester and Central Massachusetts," Timothy P. Murray, president and CEO of Worcester Regional Chamber of Commerce, said after the event.

Bowdoin is currently doing work for The Hanover Insurance Group in Worcester and Devereux Advanced Behavior Health in Rutland. The company recently completed a new Worcester office for Commonwealth Care Alliance, work at the Cummings School of Veterinary Medicine at Tufts University in Grafton. Bowdoin has 20 projects currently in progress throughout Southern New England.

Speaking during the ceremony were Chris Keeley, vice president of Bowdoin Construction; Tom Dube, vice president at Bowdoin Construction; state Sen. Michael Moore, D-Worcester; Worcester Mayor Joseph Petty; and Timothy Murray, president and CEO of the Worcester Regional Chamber of Commerce.

The new office will have three full-time employees and other staff members as needed.
